The First Development Project for the Steam Pump Ranch has been Approved!

The Oro Valley Historical Society and the Town attorneys completed their operating agreement so the Native American Garden Project could proceed to the Town Council for discussion and consideration. It was approved at the February 18th Council Meeting and subsequently signed by the Mayor and our OVHS President.

We are very excited to have the green light to proceed with our plans. We are planning to have the garden site ready for a monsoon planting this summer. We will need lots of volunteers to help once we get the garden underway. The Native American Garden will be located on the north side of the property and will start with traditional corn, beans, and squash with native agaves nearby. We are researching designs, crops, and watering methods and want to connect the community and our schools to native and historic foods and farming methods.

The initial concept for the garden has two areas. The enclosed area will be the "Three Sisters" garden which includes corn, beans and squash planted together as companion plants. The garden will provide not only an educational opportunity but establish the connection to local sources and growing practices. Plans are for some community gatherings as well.

Outside of the circular enclosed area will be rocky mounds with Agave murpheyi plants. This was an important food and fiber source for the Hohokam who farmed in the area.

Our agreement also includes permission to conduct guided tours at Steam Pump Ranch one Saturday per month. We plan to start the tours this summer. Stay tuned for more information and opportunities to participate.

March 26th – Hohokam Lifeways in the Northern Tucson Basin

Dr. Suzanne Fish is a curator of archaeology at the Arizona State Museum and a professor of anthropology at the University of Arizona. For many years her research has focused in the Arizona-Sonora borderlands involving ethnobotany, traditional farming and Hohokam settlement patterns and social organization.

This presentation will be held at the new Wyndham Hotel, Steam Pump Village, 11075 N. Oracle Road, 6:30 PM.

April 9th – Our Ranching Legacy

This will be a panel discussion providing various perspectives on the Ranching heritage of the greater Oro Valley area. Panelists include Barbara Marriott, author of "Images of America: Oro Valley", Henry Zipf, grandson of George Pusch, Ben Williams, author of "Tales of the Southwest", and Russell True, owner of the White Stallion Ranch. We'll also have maps to help us locate some of the old-time ranching areas. Please join us for an evening of history and stories. This presentation will be at the Oro Valley Library Meeting Room, 6:30 PM.

President's Message - Activities Galore!

Spring is always a busy time in Oro Valley but there are programs that allow us to pause and look back on the past and our cultural heritage. March is Archaeology Awareness Month Arizona. There are specific programs and activities being held throughout the state celebrating archaeology. An Archaeology Expo is being held in Phoenix this year. May is National Historic Preservation Month where the emphasis is on significant historic buildings and structures. It celebrates the unique and diverse heritage of our country's cities and towns.

Our Town Heritage Month in April fits well between these two months and is an opportunity to celebrate our local history. This is the first year the Oro Valley Historical Society is sponsoring a Town Heritage Month, in honor of the Town's 35th birthday (founded April 17th, 1974) and in appreciation of the cultural resources within our Town. The lecture series, heritage guide and other activities are funded in part by a Community Funding grant from the Town of Oro Valley. So, please join us for some of the activities listed on page 3 (and on the Flyer).

Steam Pump Ranch Community Day- April 18th

The Town of Oro Valley is holding a Community Heritage Day at Steam Pump Ranch on April 18th. The event is the first time the public will be able to visit the historic site and walk on the property. The day also celebrates the Town's 35th anniversary and the Mayor will cut a birthday cake. OVHS is very excited about this event and is providing a number of activities for this special day. . . .

 History stations staffed by OVHS members to share photos and history about various features of the Steam Pump Ranch.

 A youth area by Old Pueblo Archaeology that will provide a glimpse at what prehistoric times have been like in the area including a few hands on activities.

 A memory station to record you memories of ranching life.

 A photo station so you can take your picture with the likeness of the first owners of the Steam Pump Ranch, George and Matilda Pusch.

 Horses and colts to show and demonstrate some traditional cowboy and western skills including a blacksmith.

 A chance to see inside some of the building at Steam Pump.

 Visit with cowboys and ranchers who worked on some of the southern Arizona ranches.

Volunteers are needed for this April 18th Community Day Event
